

Lawyers Alliance Plays Important Role In Milestone Treasury Department Community Development Capital Initiative

THIS PAST FALL, Lawyers Alliance for New York and its network of volunteer law firms took an active role in enabling nonprofit organizations to receive loans from the U.S. Treasury Department CDFI Fund. The CDFI Fund's mission is to expand the capacity of community development financial institutions ("CDFIs") to provide credit, capital, and financial services to underserved populations and communities in the United States with the overall goal of promoting economic revitalization and community development. This recent round of loans was funded through the Troubled Asset Relief Program ("TARP"). The CDFI Fund awarded a total of $104.9 million, the largest ever regular appropriation round, to 180 CDFIs around the country, including $12.4 million to CDFIs based in New York State.

During September 2010 the CDFIs, including dozens of low-income designated community development credit unions ("CDCUs"), closed their long-term, low-interest secondary capital loans. Several Lawyers Alliance clients were among the recipients. Participating CDCUs had to demonstrate financial viability and a focus on serving their respective communities. Applicants were subjected to rigorous review by the National Credit Union Administration and the Treasury Department.

Lawyers Alliance worked with the National Federation of Community Development Credit Unions (the "Federation") to help pair 45 of the CDCU recipients in and outside New York with pro bono counsel from fifteen law firms, including Brown McCarroll, LLP; Brownstein Hyatt Farber Schreck, LLP; Dewey & LeBoeuf LLP; DLA Piper LLP (US); Duane Morris LLP; Kilpatrick Stockton LLP; Linklaters LLP; Mayer Brown LLP; Orrick, Herrington & Sutcliffe LLP; Proskauer Rose LLP; Shearman & Sterling LLP;

Benefits of an Ongoing Pro Bono Relationship

While the majority of Lawyers Alliance's volunteers take on discrete legal projects, with a beginning and end, sometimes a full team of lawyers from one law firm will commit to an ongoing volunteer general counsel relationship for a single nonprofit client. When that relationship flourishes, and the client and team work well together for years, it is a match to behold.

For Lawyers Alliance's clients, the volunteer general counsel relationship is an opportunity to receive continued, quality legal services from attorneys familiar with its operations. The law firm handles the majority of the client's business and transactional law needs. For the participating law firm or corporate legal department, its lawyers can develop a strong connection with an established and dynamic organization and provide sophisticated pro bono assistance. Among the core ingredients for a successful relationship are: a nonprofit client with multiple legal needs, a specific board or senior staff member to serve as the organization's primary contact and communicate the organization's legal needs, a law firm with a demonstrated commitment to the client's mission and business law pro bono, and a primary pro bono attorney contact to serve as the client's point of entry at the law firm. Lawyers Alliance seeks to foster a mutually worthwhile client-firm partnership by helping to facilitate communications between the parties and by serving as co-counsel on selected legal matters.

Case Example: Groundswell & Davis Polk & Wardwell

Andrés Gil and Ron Aizen from Davis Polk & Wardwell's Corporate Department lead such a team. With several colleagues, including David Bauer and Randy Sampson, they represent Groundswell Community Mural Project ("Groundswell"). Groundswell brings together youth, professional artists, and communities to create murals and other public art in underserved New York neighborhoods. Annually up to 500 youth participate. This client first came to Lawyers Alliance in 2006 for legal assistance updating its bylaws. That project led to another and another, and ultimately to the volunteer general counsel relationship.

During the past five years, the legal team from Davis Polk & Wardwell has helped Groundswell to update its corporate governance practices, review multiple contracts, revise personnel policies, and document its relationship related to artists, mural space, and youth apprentices.

This legal work has enabled the organization to experience a period of growth and to expedite complex relationships with its participants and partners. According to a client representative, "The members of the Davis Polk team have been invaluable and outstanding pro bono attorneys for Groundswell. I feel so much more secure, knowing I can call on them for counsel. They are professional, caring, respectful and responsive." Lawyers Alliance recognized this team's commitment and performance with a 2010 Cornerstone Award.

Q – What initially drew you to the Council of New York Law Associates?

Sheila – I was one of very few female associates at Cravath in 1971. Another was Carol Bellamy. Carol was one of the Council's founders and served on the Steering Committee as Treasurer. She introduced me and David to the organization. We were very active in Carol's state senate campaign (D – Brooklyn) and became Council members at that time.

Q – I've heard from Neal Johnston and others how young associates who were members of the Council and the City Bar upset the City Bar's Executive Committee vote in 1971. Would you tell me the story from your perspective?

David – We were living in Park Slope at the time. So were the Greens (Edward F. Greene, another Council founder, and his wife Dini) and others active in forming the Council.

Sheila – Matt Mallow, a Council member, told me that a group of associates wanted to run a renegade campaign to elect younger members and a woman (a first!) to the Executive Committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York. Elections were scheduled for the Stated Meeting but only attendees could vote. The meeting was preceded by what was then considered a very expensive dinner. Virtually no associates attended. But Matt and another associate, Michael Varet, a member of the Council's Coordinating Committee, read the bylaws and found that you could arrive after the dinner and still vote as long as you did so in person. Matt and Michael wanted to run for Executive Committee seats so they organized associates who were members of the City Bar. They were also looking for a woman who was a City Bar member to join them. There were very few of us in those days. I was home with a new baby and so exhausted, but I told them I would join them if they turned out the vote. With the Great Hall filled with associates and partners, we were elected in a landslide. I was hardly known in the Bar but I won what was then the largest plurality of votes in the City Bar's history because I was a woman and the times were ripe for change.

Q – What do you feel was the significance of that leadership change?

Sheila – One of the first actions we took on the Executive Committee was to eliminate the rule that you needed to be present to vote. For the next class, members could vote by paper ballot received in the mail. Changing the process of election was a first step toward diversifying the leadership for younger members, for women and for others as well. Associates were organizing and addressing pressing issues of the day. For example, during my four-year term on the Executive Committee, we created a committee whose only purpose was to consider legal issues confronting women.

David – The change gave young and non-establishment lawyers a voice in the City Bar's governance.

Q – How did you reconnect with Lawyers Alliance?

David – When I was general counsel of Coopers & Lybrand, I was approached by then Board Chair Mike Cook. Lawyers Alliance was looking to diversify the Board, comprised mostly of partners from large firms, with in-house general counsel. I joined the Board in 1999 and served as Treasurer from 2001 to 2005. Sheila and I have contributed annually and attended events ever since.

Sheila – These gatherings offer us a chance to catch up with old friends, and, for me, to connect with others interested in public service and to see the important work the organization is doing today.

Law Firm Appeal Keeps Lawyers Alliance's Programs Strong

Lawyers Alliance's 2010-2011 Law Firm Appeal is underway, thanks to the appeal's Co-Chairs, Robert C. Sheehan and Thomas H. Kennedy of Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP. Each year, this appeal raises significant funds to help Lawyers Alliance provide legal services and educational resources that benefit neighborhoods throughout New York City.

Mr. Sheehan, Of Counsel, oversees Skadden's pro bono program. He was Executive Partner of Skadden, Arps from 1994 to 2009 and previously headed the firm's Financial Institutions Merger & Acquisition Group. Mr. Sheehan brings to the law firm appeal unique understanding of how business and transactional lawyers can make a difference through pro bono projects.

Mr. Kennedy, Partner, has significant legal experience in mergers, acquisitions and other transactions and has practiced in this arena since 1981. He is global head of Knowledge Strategy for Skadden, Arps, leading the firm's thought leadership, knowledge management and client communications programs across practices and offices. Recently elected Chair of the Board of Directors of Lawyers Alliance (see page four), Mr. Kennedy's commitment to the organization and leadership in the legal community is invaluable as the 2010-2011 appeal moves ahead.

Mr. Sheehan remarks on the impact Lawyers Alliance has made in New York City communities, "Working together, Lawyers Alliance staff and pro bono attorneys supply nonprofits with effective legal strategies to preserve essential programs, ensure service continuity, and manage financial risk that threatens vital programs."

Adds Mr. Kennedy, "During the economic downturn, Lawyers Alliance has been helping nonprofit clients to address critical human needs and preserve the safety net for New Yorkers and at the same time offering excellent training for young lawyers and tremendous personal and professional satisfaction for more seasoned professionals."

Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP; Stroock & Stroock & Lavan LLP; Weil, Gotshal & Manges LLP; and White & Case LLP.

Pro bono counsel guided the CDCUs through the complex loan closing process, including due diligence, negotiation and documentation of loan agreements and required legal opinions. These awards ranged from $8,000 to more than $8 million. Additionally, the attorneys helped the CDCUs to appreciate and comply with applicable TARP regulations and understand the obligations under the documentation governing the financing. As part of the follow up, Lawyers Alliance staff attorneys drafted a post-closing compliance memorandum, with input from pro bono counsel, and the Federation then shared this memorandum with the participating CDCUs.

Nine New York CDCUs received legal help through Lawyers Alliance: Bethex Federal Credit Union, Brooklyn Cooperative Federal Credit Union, Buffalo Cooperative Federal Credit Union, Fidelis Federal Credit Union, Lower East Side People's Federal Credit Union, Neighborhood Trust Federal Credit Union, Southern Chautauqua Federal Credit Union, Union Settlement Federal Credit Union, and Workers United Federal Credit Union.

Says Lawyers Alliance Executive Director Sean Delany, "We believe we do meaningful work here at Lawyers Alliance, but seldom are the fruits of our efforts so immediate and so satisfying. The National Federation is to be commended for spearheading this initiative, and we are proud to have played a vital part in it."
